Résumé:

Deducing properties of an object from properties of its Fourier transform (and conversely) is one of the continuing themes of Fourier analysis. This talk will consider the relationship between the transform (or Fourier coefficients) and the support of the function, measure, or distribution. Bounded approximate identities play an important role.